Cumulative Performance since inception (base 100)

Market Commentary

The yield correction in fixed income markets started in mid-August and has continued aggressively through September. Central Banks rhetoric along with an expansionary fiscal policy has fuelled further the bear market over the last two weeks. The combination of these factors has resulted in an impressive market volatility forcing the BoE to buy long-end maturity bonds in an attempt to stabilize their yields. The 30y-Gilt retraced 100 bps in just one day (from 500 to 400 bps). As a consequence, the Euro area government bonds finished the month close to the highest levels of the year. Peripheral spreads widened slightly and, more specifically, BTP-Bund ended the month in the 240 bps area. Corporate-wise, spreads continued to widen MoM, following the widespread rates increase.

Performance Commentary

In September, Global Corporate Bond delivered a net performance of -3.54%.

Our positioning overperformed the euro corporate IG index. The main contributor was the underweight of duration exposure in relative terms. In the course of the month we reduced our long government exposure.

In October, we plan to keep our positioning unchanged, with a dynamic approach to government spread strategies.
