Market Commentary

Last month the Fixed Income world finally made a come back. Supported both by weak inflation data and high volatility, euro rates gapped in and tightened around 35 bps across the curves with medium-term maturities benefiting the most. Credit spreads' performance was also positive, delivering a compression of 50/60 bps roughly, which now means that IG/HY yields have tightened around 100/150 bps since the beginning of the year.

Performance Commentary

In January Euro Global Bond delivered a net performance of +2.30%. At portfolio level, we kept our strategic overweight on corporate bond (+0.4y) which was the main contributor in relative and absolute terms (+34 and +47 bps respectively). On the rates side, we kept a prudential approach throughout the month, keeping a slightly mismatched spread position (in duration terms) on peripheral countries (+0.2y vs -0.4y). Globally speaking, government bonds returned +198 bps and the credit side delivered +47. For February, we will reduce our corporate exposure so as to be more flexible in terms of tactical exposure and to build a higher quality assets exposure. From a macro perspective, inverted curves usually mean recession. We do not believe this to be the case as short-term yields shot up due to inflationary pressures, pushing historical rates above the highest point on the belly of the curve (technical inversion). On the other hand, it is probably too early to state inflation is over. For that reason, we prefer to keep a neutral duration exposure and to keep a pro-active stance should we see spikes again (increasing 0.5/1y).
